

Q2: Which safety activities have the greatest potential for improvement in your organization?

pre-task risk assessment and discussion

Safety drills

Building trust

Present managers on the workplaces

Instant feedback

Better risk analyses

risk assessments

Include the front/sharp end personnel

Q2: Which safety activities have the greatest potential for improvement in your organization?

Passage to area

risk assessment

learning from Incident investigation

Working with measurements (choice of indicators, communication about the figures etc)

Learning from near miss incidences?

User involvement in safety improvements

Developing culture

Supervisors focus on the work environment in planning and execution

Q2: Which safety activities have the greatest potential for improvement in your organization?

Risk assessments

Reflektive discussions

Listening, consultation & empathy

Risk assessment

Better quality investigations.

The cleaning up of safety clutter and buzz words with no real meaning and effect.

discussions between colleagues and managers about the reality in which they work

Discussions on every day situations. Leaders being curious to know and understand this.

Q2: Which safety activities have the greatest potential for improvement in your organization?

Communication within the projects

Safe plan of action prior to tasks

upper management understanding

Give right preconditions to be able to perform the job in a safe way.

reflecting conversations,
risk assessment on the job together

Managers in the field

Think risk during the whole job.

time for proactive actions

Q2: Which safety activities have the greatest potential for improvement in your organization?

Lagging KPI

Continuous dialogues between managers and coworkers

Involving employers

Risk assessment and proactive work

Not the high risk activities, its the routine "boring" tasks that don't normally get focus

Leadership in field

<involvement of personnel:
discussions and hazard
analysis in teams

Hazard reporting from staff

Q2: Which safety activities have the greatest potential for improvement in your organization?

Learning from incidents and accidents

To change from reactive to proactive approach

Learning from everyday experiences, kaizen - including successes

Safety discussions

Increased cross-functional interactions/communications

Measuring leading indicators

Dialog across the organisation

Participation

Q2: Which safety activities have the greatest potential for improvement in your organization?

Empathy

Staffing. The shortage of resources has become normalized.

Building genuine understanding

Common risk assessments

Risk Assessments with the right persons and leaders strongly involved

Task based risk assessments

Leaders engagement, knowledge and focus on safety using what we learn in e.g. incident investigation to design changes in the organisation, and being as mindful in that design as we are in plant design

Q2: Which safety activities have the greatest potential for improvement in your organization?

Increase hazard & risk awareness and work on reducing the risks

Resource management so that both accountability and preventative work actually can be conducted closer to the task in the business.

Learning from normal work

Security Culture

removing obstacles for doing the work as prescribed