

Q8: What are the top three lessons from safety culture that could benefit cybersecurity culture?

Humans are not a problem

The human factor

Awareness

Higher risk consciousness

Awariness

Zorro Trust

Involve everyone

it matters

Q8: What are the top three lessons from safety culture that could benefit cybersecurity culture?

Lead from the top

Just culture - more focus on organizational capabilities

all levels involved in both word and action

That people are a resource and could be part of the solution, it takes back control.

Leaders needs to take lead

awareness and act-react

Understanding human behaviour

Systematic thinking

Q8: What are the top three lessons from safety culture that could benefit cybersecurity culture?

frequent dialogues clear instructions - don't refer to human sense

People first. Make it easy to do it right. RCA awareness, and put humans in early stage of design!

Continuously working on employee habits regarding to security

Awareness of threats - creating human-friendly means to comply

A multi layer cause

Tailored training

Everyone must contribute

Q8: What are the top three lessons from safety culture that could benefit cybersecurity culture?

f2f dialogue

Engaged leader

Awareness, knowledge, good examples (är-code)

Correct it strategi

Leadership

All aboard! Awareness and keeping questions timely

Human as a resource

Research Don't be naive and trust everyone

Q8: What are the top three lessons from safety culture that could benefit cybersecurity culture?

Engagement from top management continue after the first year

You need to have both preventative measures but also, when something goes wrong, and it will, there has to be a safety net to prevent disaster

Everyone is responsible

Awareness

Necessity

make it harder to do wrong

cybersecuity safety tools

Q8: What are the top three lessons from safety culture that could benefit cybersecurity culture?

System Thinking